

Cambria Metzinger is a San Diego based mezzo-soprano from Santa Barbara, California. She has been praised for her “powerhouse vocals” and her wide stylistic range. Cambria has an extensive background in a variety of musical genres including jazz and musical theater with a primary focus in opera. She majored in classical vocal performance at San Diego State University where she was often chosen as a featured soloist for multiple concert series and masterclasses. She has had the privilege of working with acclaimed artists like Ricky Ian Gordon, Jake Heggie and Alisa Jordheim. Among the roles that she has performed throughout her career, some of the more notable ones include the Stewardess in Jonathan Dove’s Flight, Dafne in Peri’s Euridice and most recently, the leading role of Anna in Kurt Weill’s The Seven Deadly Sins. Cambria’s voice has been consistently lauded by distinguished organizations such as the National Association of Teachers Singing (NATS), the Music Teacher Association of California (MTAC) and the Santa Barbara Music Club (SBMC).
